

ALL THE PEOPLE OF THE BIBLE

This article identifies all of the people whose proper names occur in the Bible, excluding the deuterocanonical books.

The names are set out alphabetically as they are spelled in the King James Version, with variant spellings enclosed in brackets []. The meaning of the name is then given in parentheses (). Under each entry, various individuals bearing this name are differentiated by boldface brackets, like this: [1]; [2]; and so on. Then follows a description of the character, with several Bible verses listed where the name occurs. (Not all verses could be given; so if the reader is considering a passage that is not cited in the section, he must choose the character that would most likely be identical with the person in his passage.)

We have made no attempt to designate each person as a Palite, Harodite, Gileadite, and so on. Many of these designations refer to the ancestor of an individual; in other cases, they refer to the person's city, district, or distinctive clan. It is often a guess as to which meaning is intended.

The meanings of the names are not infallibly accurate; they are simply interesting possibilities. These names are ancient and their history is obscure and uncertain.

Many people in Scripture bear the same name. In dozens of cases, we cannot determine whether an individual in one book is identical with someone having the same name in another book. In the ancient world, a person was often called by more than one name.

In the transmission of Scripture, copyists occasionally made errors. Surely Reuel was not also called Deuel, nor Jemuel called Nemuel, and so on. Yet which is original? Only in a few cases do we have any clues.

We find variant forms and contractions of names through the Bible. They probably presented little difficulty to an ancient reader. But this further complicates the identification problem for us.

The Hebrew genealogies are abbreviated at many points. At times it is difficult to distinguish a man from his ancestor. Consider also the problem of trying to match an abbreviated list with a fuller list. Either the names in the abbreviated list are independent of the longer list or they are already included in it. In other words, we may find the same person included in two lists or two different people in two lists.

In a few cases, our English versions use the same word to transliterate several similar Hebrew names. In these instances, we have recorded a separate entry for each Hebrew name (e.g., Iddo).

Gibeon (?) Archaeologists believe that this site, known as el-Jib, is the biblical Gibeon. God instructed Joshua to destroy all of the people of Canaan when the Israelites took the land, but the people of Gibeon tricked him into making a treaty with them. Neighboring Amorite kings attacked Gibeon for defecting to the Israelites, and Joshua came to their aid. God granted a hailstorm and an extension of the daylight hours to help Joshua defeat the Amorites (Josh. 9-10; 11 :19). The treaty remained in force during the time of Saul and David. When the Gibeonites demanded justice for murders that Saul had committed there, David gave them seven of Saul's sons to be executed (2 Sam, 21 :1-11).

Koz ("thorn"). [1] The ancestor of a priestly family returning from captivity (Ezra 2: 61; Neh. 7:63). In the Hebrew text, the name appears as Hakkoz; the KJV considers the Ha- of the name to be the prefixed Hebrew definite article—here denoting a certain family. Others take all the word as a name (i.e., Hak-koz). If this be the case, the Hakkoz of 1 Chronicles 24: 10 probably also refers to this person. [2] An ancestor of one who helped to repair the walls of Jerusalem (Neh. 3:4, 21).
